

THE VERONA TIMES

SINCE 1502

VOLUME 30, ISSUE 5

Tybalt's Demise Screams Out Loud Across Verona

Onlookers were shocked as Tybalt was stabbed in the square.

Tybalt finally went too far. His hot-headedness and rage got the best of him as he was slain by Romeo, son of Lord Montague. This occurred in broad daylight right in our very streets! Onlookers witnessed Tybalt mocking Romeo and then Mercutio stepping up to defend Romeo's honor since Romeo refused to partake in the duel. Only once Romeo's friend Mercutio was killed by Tybalt did Romeo step in, and in doing so, killed Tybalt. It seems like this event will only further the violent feud between these two families. Citizens, beware!

HAIKU FOR TYBALT:

Violence never wins.
Tybalt learned that the hard way.
Romeo now run!

